

Every Spring

Bees exit their hives for the first time since winter

They begin to gather nectar in order to create honey in their hives. This act is referred to as pollination, and it plays a huge role in the ability for most plants to be able to grow and reproduce, in turn affecting our fruit and vegetable supply